

Guy F. Caruso

In February 2002, President Bush nominated Guy F. Caruso to the position of Administrator of the Energy Information Administration (EIA), a statistical agency within the United States Department of Energy (DOE) that provides policy-independent data, forecasts and analyses regarding energy. In August 2002, Mr. Caruso commenced his new role. Mr. Caruso has acquired over 30 years of energy experience, with particular emphasis on topics relating to energy markets, policy and security.

He first joined DOE as a Senior Energy Economist in the Office of International Affairs and soon became the Director of the Office of Market Analysis. Other leadership roles held by Mr. Caruso during his tenure at DOE include: Director, Office of Oil and Natural Gas Policy, Office of Domestic and International Energy Policy; and Director, Office of Energy Emergency Policy Evaluation. Prior to joining DOE, Mr. Caruso worked at the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) as an International Energy Economist in the Office of Economic Research.

Before assuming his new role at EIA in August 2002, Mr. Caruso served as the Executive Director of the Strategic Energy Initiative Project, under the Energy and National Security Program of the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), a position he had held since 1998. CSIS is a private, nonpartisan organization dedicated to providing world leaders with strategic insights on, and policy solutions to, current and emerging global issues. During this time, Mr. Caruso was also the Director of the National Energy Strategy (NES) project for the United States Energy Association (USEA). Mr. Caruso spearheaded the USEA publication “Toward a National Energy Strategy,” which was released in February 2001, and a follow-up study entitled “National Energy Strategy Post 9/11” which was released in July 2002.

Mr. Caruso has worked at the Paris-based International Energy Agency (IEA), first as the Head of the Oil Industry Division where he was responsible for analyzing world oil supply/demand and developments in the oil industry; and, later, as Director of the Office of Non-Member Countries where he directed studies of energy-related developments.

Mr. Caruso holds a B.S. in Business Administration and an M.S. in Economics from the University of Connecticut. He also earned a Masters of Public Administration from Harvard University. Guy Caruso and his wife, Donna, reside in Virginia. They have two daughters, Dawn and Lisa.

March 2006